Steph's 5 Money Tips

You feel like shit. You hate life and you are jealous of those phonies who got a big car, a big house and lots of cash. You have no money, you have a shitty place to live and your car just broke down and you can't get to work. These situations might not apply to you, but they're still fucked up. Usually when something happens to us that causes us to feel stuck it's because our life is about to go in a new direction. This is good news and the key to the stuck feeling!

Usually people feel stuck when they have money problems so here are some money tips:

1. You owe rent. Make them wait for the payment. Why stress if you don't have the money. Call them and be kind. Tell them when you think you might have the money and if they say no, then make them take you to court. No worries if you have to move it's supposed to be and if you don't move why worry. What's happening is real but if you step back you could be in for a brand new place even if your credit is cheesy. We don't know what's behind the next door until we go through it, however if you see yourself sleeping in your car, you will, so you might as well see yourself snoring in a cozy bed.
2. You owe on your credit card and don't have the money. Make them wait. Don't worry about your credit score because you ain't buying a new car or house right now anyway. Credit scores are over rated and are a form of programming. Technically a late payment won't appear on your credit report until 30 days after you miss the payment. Just don't answer your phone or if you can't stand it make a payment arrangement with them. I live in a cash world and I will never let credit cards or my credit score have power over me again! I live in a cash world with cash in my pocket! Yes sir!

3. Your car payment is due and you don't want a repossession on your credit report nor do you want your car taken. Call them and string them along until you get the money or I suggest you ask them to put your current payment on the end of your loan. They usually do. Just try it!

4. Your child support payments are kicking your ass and you want out. Take your ex to court or sweet talk him or her into giving you a break. The best thing to do is to give your ex something even if he or she bitches about the amount. If you just don't have the money, then you best borrow from someone and if you are not making enough money to support your kids it's time you up your game and teach yourself some new skills. Youtube has millions of training courses. The tip here is to get off your ass!

5. You just got fired and you don't know what to do. It happens every day to thousands of people. It might seem hopeless now but it was the best thing for you. No need to sulk and have self pity. The job owes you nothing even if you've been there 25 years. Either you fucked up or they needed to save some money. No one owes you a thing! I suggest you get busy and put out some new resumes along with teaching yourself some new skills. The key to a good resume is the headline. Make sure you have a good one. Or better yet it's time to start your own business!

No matter what if you don't have the money you can't pay. If you can't borrow it or pawn something you are indeed stuck. Don't blame anyone but yourself and if you don't like what's happening in your life change it. If you are broke get some new skills because the money is out there. The number one reason you are stuck is because you haven't made any decisions to commit to a new direction in your life. When you feel stuck you are outside of your comfort zone. Since you couldn't or wouldn't make a decision, life made a decision for you. The only thing in your way is for you to make a decision on what your next move will be. Hence this is why you are stuck.

The best thing about being stuck is soon you'll be unstuck. It doesn't last forever. Whatever you were supposed to learn from being stuck you will. When you look back at your life a year from now you will see the situation that has you stuck is really a blessing in disguise!
